

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Nonacademic Paper Presenting Inevitable Theft Using Cryptocurrency Distributed Ledger Failures.

Narrative of evidence classification with probability prediction.

KNOXVILLE, Tn., Oct. 14, 2026 – Dr. Stephen Dawson releases The Scam Countdown: Inevitable Theft Using Cryptocurrency Distributed Ledger Failures on October 14, 2026, Eastern Time. The writing is a nonacademic paper in the form of a narrative presenting the evidence that the failure of the cryptocurrency distributed ledger will occur before there is widespread adoption of central bank digital currency. This writing presents the classification of evidence resident in the public domain, with a prediction based on a probability calculation of the failure of the cryptocurrency distributed ledger.

"It is not a matter of if the failure will occur. It is a matter of when the failure will occur," says Dr. Dawson. "There is abundant evidence the cryptocurrency distributed ledger failure will occur, but not until there is more money in the decentralized currency system." Dr. Dawson went on to explain, "The only unknown about the failure is how long it will take the users of decentralized currency to realize they are not able to recover from the loss of their assets when the cryptocurrency distributed ledger no longer balances the credits and debits contained in their digital wallet."
